Comments:	We went to the Yzerfontein farm stall a couple of weeks ago and went to the back of the restaurant where they keep animals. The cages and the condition of the animals are shocking. The cages are dirty, smelly, the water is overrun by algae. They have either Alpaca/Lama,not sure which one, and they are extremely thin. I had my friend with me that has a sheep farm and she was utterly shocked when she put her fingers through their wool and all she felt was ribs sticking out. I mention her living on a sheep farm because she knows how they should feel under the wool. Us as city folk don't know to feel against the bodies of the animals to check their condition We were there for quite a while and saw nobody moving around the cages , cleaning, feeding or keeping an eye on them. They have a large area at the back and alot of animals and they should have a permanent keeper for this animal "sanctuary" they use as an attraction for paying guests. PLEASE send someone out there or get the local vet to go have a look, but do something. These animals are being abused by their so called owners Thank you Sanet van Rhyn 082 217 2725
