CHECKLISTS

General Report Comments: Upon arrival, the gate was open and I entered the property where I found the owner sitting inside the house. She seemed intoxicated and her husband approached me to discuss the matter. He was not present yesterday.

He advised that their son took the dog this afternoon to the veterinary hospital and has not returned yet. I asked them if he took money with and he said that the person who knocked the dog with her car is going to pay, I asked if she went with and he said no. I informed him that eventhough she will pay, the son will have to pay now otherwise the vet wont assist him, and that must just keep the reciepts to show the person wjo knocked the dog to get the money back. He understood.

I advised that I will issue a final warning till monday, and that he has to understand that the responsibility for veterinary treatment lies with them as owners and not with the driver of the car. He said he understood and will ensure to have the dog seen by a vet if his son did not manage today.
