Dear Katya,

Thank you again for reporting your concerns to us. Our inspector attended the pin location you provided this morning to investigate the matter.

Unfortunately, the location appears to consist of three separate large properties with different entrances/gates, and no one responded despite repeated attempts to make contact at the properties. As the houses are set back from the gates, it was not possible to determine which property the complaint relates to or to gain access for further inspection.

This is why we requested your contact number, in situations like this, inspectors often need to contact the complainant while on site for clarification or guidance so that we can act quickly and effectively. The contact number you provided for "Chihuahua" unfortunately goes directly to voicemail.

To assist us in properly investigating this matter, could you please confirm the following:

Have you personally visited the property and seen the animals in question yourself?

Can you provide a more accurate description of the property involved?

Do you perhaps have photographs of the house, entrance, animals, or any identifying landmarks?

Any additional directions or information that may help us identify the correct property?

We take all welfare complaints seriously and want to ensure our inspectors' time and resources are used as effectively as possible so that animals in distress can be assisted promptly.

We appreciate your cooperation and look forward to receiving further information so we can continue with the investigation.

Kind regards,

Louise van Zyl
