Comments:

I saw about 200 lovebirds raomnig around free at the above address some of them have created nests inside the ceiling and others stay at the trees.

It's not compulsory to remove the love birds however if decided to remove the lovebirds the procedure undertaken should be for the benefit of the Love-birds, using methods that do not cause pain, suffering and minimum distress towards them.

I will suggest the ceiling must be taken down where the love-birds have nested then after roof space is to close it off so that the lovebirds do not get trapped/closed inside.

2nd I will suggest that the must be rules and regulations not feeding the lovebirds because feeding them attracts them to come.

We opposed keeping love lovebirds in cages and they should express normal behavior

It's not compulsory that the lovebirds should be removed when they stay peaceful in the area and no harm is being done towards them.

As human population increases animals are forced to share space with them and this is possible as long we humanely treat the animals just like lovebirds.
