General Report Comments: The owner of the dog who's renting the house upstairs finally came to the gate when we hooted and knocked at the gate. He allowed me entry into the house to check his dog's living conditions. He owns a 5-month-old, white-tri-colored, male crossbreed puppy. The puppy had access to adequate shelter, potable water, and food. When I asked about his way of restraining/controlling the dog from running he did admit to confining the dog to its kennel but said the dog would cry when doing so. He denied claims of tying up the dog to a tree yet there was a rope tied to the tree. I tried convincing the owner about giving up the dog to the SPCA because his situation was not suitable for keeping the dog but he refused saying the dog belonged to his brother who was still away on holiday. I issued him a warning not to confine or chain the dog in future, or if the dog is found outside the yard it will impounded as a stray. He said he would be moving the dog to another place in Jeppestown after I had alerted him on a few things based on his living situation but should he not be successful in doing so, he will call me to come and fetch the dog.
