General Report Comments: Upon my arrival at the Pet-shop I met with Mr Barnard store manager and I informed him about the nature of the complaint. He informed me that the chick has already been moved outside the incubator to the new enclosure. I requested to see the chick:- We went to see the chick which which was kept in a cage with food, water & enrichment toys:- a ball and teddy bear for environmental stimulation.

The glass enclosure which was incubator for the chick was to maintain a stable consistent temperature with uv light so that the chick doesn't get too cold and for the chick well-being. I could see if the chick was comfortable or not comfortable since the African grey bird was removed already during my inspection. The size of the incubator appeared to be acceptable and according to Mr Barnard the chick had food, water and its toys inside. They call the bird "Kopise" his a male about 4 months of age

They are in the process of getting new rabbits enclosures that will have a door with a lockers. They are currently kept in a wooden enclosures with food, water and hidden plastic containers with a temporally man-made lids to prevent unsupervised handling of animals. I was informed the animals are handled under the supervision of the staff and management . Full inspection was conducted see attached pet shop check list.
