General Report Comments: Upon my arrival, I met with Gloria and introduced myself. I inquired about the dog and the reported concern.

Gloria explained that the dog is occasionally confined to the rear section of the property when workers are present or when vehicles are entering and exiting the premises. She advised that the dog may cry or show signs of distress while confined in this area. However, once the workers have completed their work, the dog is released and allowed to move freely within the property. The dog is also allowed to roam freely in the yard when the gates are closed and the property is secure.

Based on my observations during the inspection, the confinement appeared to be temporary and was implemented for safety and security purposes, particularly while workers and vehicles were accessing the property. The dog was provided with access to the property once these activities had ceased.

At the time of my inspection, I did not identify any animal welfare concerns arising from the temporary confinement arrangements. Owner educated about sterilization and stated that already has made arrangement with Wendywood vet to be sterilized.
