General Report Comments: I met the owner at the house, who had acknowledged the incident caused by his dogs. He said he already spoken to the family of the victim's dog and was willing to take responsibility for the damage his dogs caused. HE stated that the dogs snuck out during a building contractor's work when one of them left both gates open. The dogs then got an opportunity to run in the streets, and that's how they attacked the dog at house no. 23(A) Stanrich Street, Cyrildene, but the dog never died. He only sustained injuries and was taken to the Brumalake Vet for treatment. Mr Mabuza said he was willing to settle their vet bills on factual circumstances and not on any distorted allegations of the dog being attacked to death. He further stated that there were questionable requests made by the victim's family when they only sent the vet bill for day one, but the next day, he was told more fees were charged for the stitches after the dog had already been discharged. He said he cannot be forced into paying off questionable bills; if so, then they would rather take it up with his legal advisor. He gave me their contact details and advised him to be more sensitive about the situation, as he was in the wrong and to try to be more understanding of their situation. I told him I will be approaching the family to hear their version.
