General Report Comments: The six dairy cows and the gelding horse were free roaming in the dry grassy paddock upon arrival. Water containers were present within the paddock. Ms Senekal explained that with the recent weather, their kraals have completely flooded over with faeces and mud. At this stage the kraals cannot be cleaned out until they dry more. As a result, the cows are not being taken into the wet kraals anymore, instead at night time they are taken into the area near the pig pens. Going towards the farm yard a large enclosed space contained Muscovy ducks. The enclosure had short grass and a large red shelter for the ducks. Also within the enclosure, a large enrichment bath was present but the bath was green with algae. Opposite this duck enclosure, two pig pens were present. The pens had dry dirt flooring, with zinc shelters for the pigs. Dirty cut up tired used as food containers were present. The buckets used for water were dirty and empty. In the rest of the pig pens, enclosures were similar. Buckets containing water contained muddy water. In one section of the kraals, the two calves were being kept. The flooring was muddy but busy drying out; therefore, the calves hoofs were not deep inside the mud. Dirty containers were present. I was informed that the two calves drink from their mothers twice a day. Next to the pig pens is the zinc stable for the gelding horse.

On the other side of the plot, the chicken enclosures were present. Every chicken enclosure was dirty with excess chicken faeces and rubble on the floors, dirty nesting boxes and perches, as well as , dirty water and food containers. In two separate enclosures, four Runt Pigeons were present. Their enclosures were also extremely dirty and covered in bird faeces on the floors, perches, inside nesting boxes and dirty food and water containers.

Inside the feed room, more chickens were present that have also made the entire feed room dirty with excess chicken faeces. All feed were still in their bags inside metal drums. The chickens are fed KWD chicken feed mix, the cows are fed KWD Dairy Cow feed mix and the pigs' feed mix is purchased from a local farmer.

The dogs on the property were all in satisfactory condition, and are all farm animal friendly. The dogs are in and out of the house and sleep inside the house. Food and water bowls were present on the stoep for the dogs. The dogs are fed a diet of York KWD pellets. We discussed prices for the male dog sterilisation as he is the only dog not yet sterilised.
