You are hereby warned that:

The following must be rectified within 20 hours:

- One longhair white Teddybear hamster was observed to have growths over its body that appears to be cancer. It was mentioned that the hamster has not been seen by a veterinarian and is not for sale.
 - The hamster must be examined and treated by a veterinarian and a report must be forwarded to the SPCA within the given timeframe;
- In future, any animal in your care and/or under your control that is either injured and/or diseased and/or in any form of a compromised state must be taken for veterinary assessment and possible treatment if the animal is in need of such treatment without unnecessary delay as this can cause unnecessary suffering to an animal. If you are not in the position to render or procure veterinary treatment for an animal that is in need of such veterinary treatment, humane euthanasia must be the alternative option.

Recommendation:

- We also highly advise that a Standard Operation Procedure (SOP) is compiled and shared amongst your staff regarding animals in need of veterinary treatment or euthanasia, as this will aid in the correct procedures being followed during these instances and likely prevent animals from suffering unnecessarily.
