Comments: Tuesday, 09 April 2024:

If we are to consider opening a docket at this stage, we'd be doing so prematurely. It is too early to consider a docket. Rudy is already trying to schedule a follow up. The owner appears to be co-operating - probably a first for the industry.

I think the Cape of Good Hope SPCA should be proud of this case because (based on my biased experiences and prejudices) the NSPCA does not always action shelter for cattle in facilities and circumstances such as these. One of the many reasons for this is that most veterinarians will testify for the industry, making action by prosecution difficult. This is why I think the COGH SPCA should take pride in how they are handling this case.

I believe the action currently being taken is sufficient and there is NFA ito opening a docket (at least not yet at this stage).
