Comments:	I spoke to Dr George who told me that he think the dog might have some type of bone cancer but it isn't effecting the dogs quality of life and the dog does not have discomfort . He then phoned FAW and spoke to the veterinarian that previously examined the dog and both of them agreed that the dog is fine for now and if the condition does get worse, that either the swollen digit gets amputated or that the leg gets amputated depending on how bad it is. The dog will be rto'd tomorrow
