Comments: Good morning Ms Crook,

Thank you for your email.

Xavier is currently receiving treatment, and the attending veterinarians would like to monitor his response before making any decisions regarding discharge. As previously agreed during your visit, he is scheduled to undergo neutering today. The decision to discharge him will be based on the outcome of this procedure and his overall clinical response.

Medication has been dispensed for Coco, and her condition is also being monitored.

Please find attached the veterinary report for your reference. It is important to note that both dogs are required to return for weekly veterinary check-ups. These follow-up visits are essential to ensure that their conditions are improving. The frequency of visits will continue only until the attending veterinarian is satisfied with their recovery. This requirement will be formally included in the release agreement, and it will be your responsibility to ensure the dogs are brought in as scheduled.

We are affording you an opportunity to rectify the situation. However, non-compliance with the treatment plan and follow-up requirements will leave us with no option but to seek a warrant for the removal of the dogs. Your cooperation is essential to ensure their continued care and recovery.

Kind regards

Chief Inspector Jaco Pieterse
