History

Car rode over the dog

Owner incredibly difficult. O would not allow me to work with the dog without him being present. Would not allow us to take x-rays without being present either, explained it is a legal issue for him to be present in the x-rays room. He eventually agreed to help placing the dog on the x-ray table and then stepping out while x-rays were being taken. He also told me he does not want pain medication for the dog, only anti-inflammatories, as he believes the body will heal on its own.

Physical Exam

Dog in shock, shivering and in pain, not able to walk
MM still pink
Heart quite difficult to hear on auscultation, HR 140
No lung sounds but breathing with increased effort
T 37.8

Assessments

HBC

Pneumothorax

Multiple fractured ribs

Chest x-rays - pneumothorax and lung contusions, multiple fractured ribs
Abdominal x-rays - unable to clearly visualize bladder, dog needs abdominal ultrasound
Too painful to get appropriate views of limbs

Plan

Offered full hospitalisation with fluid stabilisation, pain management, O2, follow-up x-rays, CE R8000-10000. Explained pneumothorax needs to be monitored really closely as air may need to be drained. I explained that air is not supposed to sit around the lungs. I also explained that Falco needs an abdominal scan as I cannot visualise the bladder on the x-ray and I worry that it has ruptured with the car driving over him.
Dog also needs appropriate pain management as he has fractured ribs and is in severe pain.

Owners mom was also present during the conversation. She was happy for us to admit.

But O refused for us to admit the dog into hospital for further care as he "did not want to leave him alone in hospital". I offered to give the dog a dose of morphine but explained it will only last a couple of hours. O refused that too. I explained that nsoids are contra-indicated in cases of shock and that I was not comfortable at this stage to give nsoids, but again said I could give morphine.

O refused all treatment and said he would look after the dog alone.
Refusal of treatment for signed
