Comments:	I contacted the respondent telephonically regarding the veterinary treatment required for the puppy. He explained that he is currently unemployed and was therefore unable to afford the cost of the required testing. He further stated that the puppy had vomited but appeared to have recovered and was now doing well. I explained to the respondent that it is his responsibility as the animal's owner to ensure that the puppy receives the necessary veterinary attention and is examined by a veterinarian to establish its health status. The respondent clarified that he was not necessarily unable to afford the care of his dogs , but that he was unable to take them to the veterinarian at that time. I reminded him that he had been issued a warning requiring him to take the dogs to the veterinarian within 24 hours and that he had therefore been afforded the opportunity to comply with the instruction .
