Comments:	ADDITIONAL INFO RECEIVED FROM COMPL ON WHASTAPP: Katy OCT 09, 11:14 The way Nicole treats these animals is absolutely heartbreaking and unacceptable. Animals are living beings who feel pain, hunger, fear and suffering. They depend on humans to protect them, feed them and provide them with a safe, clean environment. Hitting dogs with their leashes is not acceptable discipline. A leash should be used to guide and control a dog safely, not as an object to hurt or frighten it. Denying dogs proper food and keeping them in a disgusting, unhygienic environment raises serious concerns about their welfare, health and safety. What makes this situation even more concerning is the fact that Nicole allegedly leaves the property for hours every day, leaving the animals without proper supervision. A dog fight reportedly broke out, and instead of ensuring that the animals were safe and receiving the necessary attention, the dogs were left on the property until their owners arrived. How can anyone claim to care for animals while allowing them to live in these conditions? Owning or looking after an animal is a responsibility, not a privilege to be abused. Dogs cannot speak up for themselves, explain their pain or ask for help. That is why the people responsible for them must treat them with kindness, provide sufficient food and clean living conditions, and seek veterinary attention when necessary. This is not something that should simply be ignored. If animals are being hit, neglected, left without adequate food or kept in filthy conditions, the situation needs to be investigated by the appropriate animal welfare authorities. Animals deserve protection, not suffering. They deserve food, clean water, a safe environment and compassionate care. No animal should have to endure neglect or fear because the person responsible for its welfare fails to meet that responsibility. I hope these animals get the care, safety and protection they deserve. Their welfare must come first. TEAH MURPHY 2026-10-09 13:48
